ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

First and foremost, I thank the almighty God for giving me the vitality to carry out this research.

My special thanks go to Dr. Ahmed Kitunzi Mutunzi, my supervisor, for providing unlimited, invaluable and active guidance throughout the study. His immense knowledge of underlying research principles and utmost professionalism enabled me to shape this research project to the product it is today. I am enormously grateful.

I further appreciate all my lecturers at the college of business and management sciences for facilitating a unique, challenging and rewarding experience. Specific thanks to Dr. Charles Ssendyona who has inspired me to go on and study a doctorate. Also, I extend my gratitude to the URA staff for the help accorded to me, the hospitality and specifically the promptness in responding to the questionnaires.

Finally, I owe my utmost gratitude to a great pool of people including my colleagues who in one way or another contributed towards the successful completion of this project and the MBA as a whole. To all of you, I say a big THANK YOU and GOD BLESS YOU!

DEDICATION

This report is dedicated to my family, my father Charles Titiya, my mother Allen Titiya and to my siblings Michael, Allan, Ivan and Samie. Thank you for your unrelenting prayers, unwavering support and everlasting love.

ABSTRACT

There is a strong incentive for Multi-National Corporations to shift their profits from a country with a high tax regime like Uganda to another that has a favourable tax regime through transfer pricing. The purpose of this study was to evaluate the effectiveness of Uganda's transfer pricing regulations in curbing this vice.

The study used a cross-sectional design, 82 employees of Uganda Revenue Authority were the targeted sample and primary data was obtained using Self-Administered questionnaires. The questionnaires were edited for accuracy, consistency and completeness. The data was analyzed using Statistical Package for Social Sciences (SPSS).

The study found that the reporting requirements imposed under regulation 7(1), penalties under Regulation 7(6) and documentation requirements imposed under regulation 8 were effective in curbing transfer pricing.

However, it was recommended that there should be a mechanism to carry out monitoring and evaluation of these laws periodically so as to stop them from being circumvented or becoming obsolete.
